Connors protests railroad's cutting of trees near 7th Street

By Steve Marschke
News-Ledger Editor

A Broderick-area businessman has protested the cutting of a number of trees next to his property in the 6th St. area, but the landowner -- Union Pacific Railroad -- is apparently within its rights to cut them, said a city official.

"I went out to the site," said Don Schatzel, director of the West Sacramento Parks and Community Services Department. "They were clearly taking down trees that did not appear to be 'significant' trees or 'heritage' trees," he added, citing too classes of trees which are chosen by species and size for special protection under a city tree ordinance. "I didn't see anything that looked like what they were doing was illegal."

Tim Connors of Sun-Cal Construction on 6th St. said a contractor for the railroad was removing oaks, walnuts and cottonwoods up to 50 feet tall last week from the property near 7th St. and the railroad tracks. Connors said he contacted railroad officials and asked them to stop the cutting. He even offered to maintain a group of four or five trees near his property if they were left intact.

"They said they would leave them if I maintain them," said Conners, adding that the tree-cutting had stopped, at least temporarily.

Railroad officials could not immediately be reached for comment.

Administrators, staff of GSMS meet to air their differences

Representatives from the teaching staff at Golden State Middle School, their union, school principal Janette Clark, and the administration of the Washington Unified School District will meet for four hours today at a Sacramento hotel for a workshop intended to explore the source of tensions among the school's faculty.

The unusual "communications" workshop, closed to the public, will take place beginning at 4 p.m. at the Canterbury Inn.

School board president Irene Eklund assigned herself and fellow board member Pat Flint to represent the board at the meeting. Other attendees include teacher's union president Patty Yamat, W.U.S.D. attorney Jack Parham, Joan Stout (a labor representative for the California Teacher's Association), and a number of teachers selected by the union.

Some teachers at the school have complained about changes being made since the new principal arrived this year and a number of faculty resignations have resulted.

School board creates steering group for bond

By Steve Marschke
News-Ledger Editor

School board members of the Washington Unified School District approved last night a 35-40 member community school bond task force.

The committee is not designed to be a campaign committee, said Superintendent Dr. Dennis Kelleher, but rather a community group charged with determining what kind of school bond to put on the ballot in 1999 and how to go about doing so.

Which election date in 1999 is the school district targeting?

"That's one of the things this committee is supposed to decide," said Kelleher. "I'm just guessing, but it will probably go to a regular election, either March, June or November."

The committee will be asked to come up with a recommendation on whether the district should pursue a general obligation bond, a Mello-Roos assessment or other method. Also on the table will be the question of how much money to pursue and the problem of where to allocate that money if the bond measure passes. Twice in the 1990s, the district pursued a school bond to build a new high school and renovate the current high school for use as a middle school.

At the suggestion of resident Grace Ohlson, said Kelleher, his recommendation for the make-up of the committee changed to include more people who live in the school district, with fewer voting members consisting of outside residents (such as businesspeople) who have interests in the district.

Ohlson said yesterday that she felt the committee should be a strict "citizens' committee."

Sacramento celebrates Gold Rush era

By Daryl Fisher
Features Editor

The 'Saloon,' with costumed actors -- a converted Laughs Unlimited establishment

Over the Labor Day weekend, the Second Great Gold Rush was held in Old Town Sacramento, once again reminding West Sacramentans that we live right across the river from what was once the West's most populous and important city.

The famous Gold Rush of the late 1840s was the world's largest peacetime migration, and for anyone who attended the four-day event, they were treated to living history characters in authentic dress, including, just to mention a few, an assayer, a baker, a saddle maker, a profusely sweating blacksmith, a long-bearded mining supply merchant, a telegraph dispatcher, a gun-toting sheriff, and a number of scantily clad dance hall girls who were hanging out at the Stinky Tent Saloon.

For those interested in learning how people from that era actually lived, there were demonstrations in bread baking, clothes making, gold panning, horse wagon driving, and gun fighting. You could also get on one of the numerous horse-drawn wagons, including an army ambulance, a buffalo chip wagon, a paddy wagon, a stage coach, and the cadillac of all carriages, the surrey.

An authentic-looking beaver trapper outfitted in loose fitting buckskin clothing who insisted on being called Bear explained that, "The life I lead is a very lonely one. Sometimes I go for months without seeing another white man, not to mention that there are no women in the mountains I inhabit. The key to everything is the beaver pelt. It makes beautiful, shiny, water-proof felt hats, and that is how I make my living."

A traveling medicine man wearing an Abe Lincoln top hat cried out from in front of his wagon for everyone with any kind of an illness to listen up. He then very systematically explained that his Kickapoo Indian tonic cure-all was good for just about everything, including the following: worms, pimples, baldness, dropsy, diarrhea, snake bite, boils, the croup, and of course, itching of any kind.

Ben the baker told his audience that miners didn't eat very nutritious meals and that a good cook was literally worth his weight in gold. Instead of living on hardtack and parched corn, a well-trained cook could do everything from properly roast coffee beans to make a pineapple upside-down cake. "When the boys have a little too much to drink and go to shooting off their guns," said Ben, "they make a real big effort never to shoot the cook. He's too important to kill."

A rare black gold miner explained that during the Gold Rush, people of African ancestry were expected to be silent and respectful when encountering whites, and that they were required to do their prospecting in a place like Negro Bar, which was on the left bank of the American River in the Sierra foothills, and was on land owned by William Leidesdorff, a mulatto and self-made well-off entrepreneur. "If we left Negro Bar to prospect in other areas," explained the black gold miner, "we could expect to run into trouble, and if we did stake out a claim that wasn't in Negro Bar, it would surely be jumped by white miners."

Team Sokolich: two for the arts

By Daryl Fisher

JOE and BETTY SOKOLICH

Betty Fairbairn Sokolich's parents came from Scotland and they settled down in New Haven, Connecticut soon after her father had finished his service in the Canadian Army during World War One.

"My father was a painter and decorator," recalled Betty, "and although he always had plenty of work, he and my mother were homesick by the time I was born, and they decided to move back to Scotland."

From infancy to her 12th year, Betty lived in Scotland, and although some of her friends were always calling her a 'yankee', she still has fond memories of growing up there.

"It's a wonderful country," said Betty, "with very friendly people and lots of beautiful scenery. I still go back every other year for a visit and it has always felt like home to me."

Although Scotland was an idyllic place for a young girl with artistic sensibilities to be growing up in the 1920s, there was little work for her father and times were very hard.

"My father finally decided to return to the United States," said Betty, "and after my sister's health improved -- she had tuberculosis -- the rest of the family joined him in Chicago."

The Southside of Chicago had quite a reputation in 1929 and some of her friends and family thought it was pretty brave to be returning to the United States.

"Al Capone and people like that were still running around Chicago back then," remembered Betty, "but about the only thing that really happened to us was that my father's car got stolen, although that was actually a pretty big deal because no one in Scotland had a car."

While attending high school, Betty was encouraged to study subjects like bookkeeping and typing, but her first love had always been the arts, and it wasn't long before she was spending most of her free time at the Chicago Art Institute.

"A very nice shorthand teacher actually once gave me a passing grade and said, 'I know what it's like to be a square peg in a round hole'," said Betty, "and I've always remembered that."

When Betty was 18, she met

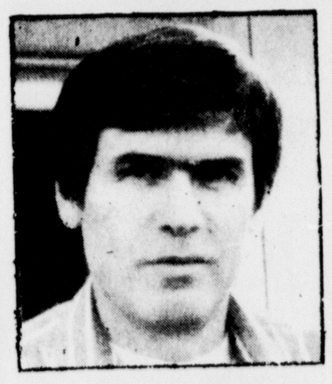
Are you tired of dressing up for work every morning?

My Back Pages



By Daryl Fisher

Last Thursday, at approximately seven o'clock in the morning, I happened to be within hearing range of my sleepy-eyed wife and daughter as they both reluctantly stared into their respective clothes closets and said almost in unison, "Okay, what am I going to wear to work today?"

As they both sighed and slowly shook their heads from side to side, I got the distinct impression that picking out something to wear to work every morning is one task that most women have come to truly hate.

So, being the insensitive male I am, I strolled over to them and said, "What seems to be the problem here?"

"There's absolutely nothing to wear in there," explained my wife, sadly pointing at the clothes in her closet.

"What in the world are you talking about?" I asked with disbelief. "Just look at all those clothes. The wooden rod they're hanging from is almost bent in two from all the weight."

"But they're just the same old things," explained my daughter, whose closet is even more stuffed with clothes and shoes than my wife's.

"You want to know what I see when I look in my closet?" my wife asked me.

"What?"

"I see things that need to be ironed, mended, sent to the cleaners, hemmed and thrown out, but I don't see anything I want to wear to work."

"And even if you can find something to wear every morning," interjected my daughter, "it's still just one big pain."

"Why's that?" I asked naively.

"Because there's all these rules you have to remember," she said.

"What rules?" I asked, not having a clue what she was talking about.

"It would take me hours and hours to go over all the rules, Dad."

"How about telling me just a few of them then," I suggested.

"Okay," she said, "to begin with, you can never mix fabrics, your belt and purse have to match your shoes, your earrings have to go with your outfit, you can't show any cleavage at work, your shoes have to be darker than your hose, you can't wear horizonal stripes unless you want everyone to think you're fat, you can only wear white shoes between Memorial Day and Labor Day, and if you want to look thin and stylish, it's best to wear black. Believe me, the list goes on and on."

"You men are so lucky," said my wife. "You don't have to put any thought into what you wear at all."

"Boy is that true," quickly agreed my daughter. "I mean, a man can wake up in the morning and decide he wants to be 'Mr. Pink Shirt Guy' for a day, and it's no big deal."

"Look," I suggested, stating what I believed to be the obvious, "if you're both unhappy with your wardrobes, why don't you just go out and buy some new clothes?"

"But that's not the answer," said my wife. "Even when we buy ourselves a new outfit, we're usually bored with it after we wear it a few times. The problem is all the pressure we're under to look good everyday."

"Exactly," said my daughter. "Not only are men always looking at women, but the women I work with check each other out from head to toe every single day. And to show you just how hopeless it is, there's this one woman I work with who actually gets it right every single day. I mean, her hair and makeup are always perfect, her clothes fit just the way they're supposed to, her shoes and accessories always pull her outfit together, and you want to know what?"

"What?" I asked with interest.

"Everyone hates her!"

"Hey," I said as a light bulb suddenly went off in my head, "I think I've got a solution to the problem."

"And what might that be?" asked my wife suspiciously.

"Uniforms!" I suggested with the same kind of pride which probably came to the person who first figured out that the world was round and not flat.

"Uniforms?" asked my daughter with a distinctly puzzled expression on her face.

"That's right," I said. "Just think how easy it would be for women to come up with an outfit every morning if everyone had to wear uniforms?"

"Let me see if I understand you correctly," said my daughter with a smile. "You're suggesting that every woman in the whole country wear exactly the same outfit every morning?"

"Well," I said, deciding it would probably be alright to amend my original brilliant idea just a tad, "how about this? It would be the same outfit, alright, but it would come in all kinds of different colors."

"And just what might this outfit look like?" asked my daughter.

"Oh, I don't know," I said, wondering why my wife and daughter were beginning to laugh, "but I sure like those white blouses and pleated plaid skirts that girls wear to Catholic school."

WUSD board actions

From the Washington Unified School District

Among actions and discussions at the August 28 meeting of the Washington Unified School District Board of Education were the following:

W.T.A. update: Patty Yamat, president, Washington Teachers Association, announced that the association is out of impasse and they have reached a tentative agreement. They have agreed to a two-year agreement -- 1997-98 and 1998-99. For 1997-98, there shall be an increase of 3.13% on all unit salary schedules, and there shall be a longevity increase from $1195 to $1300 at steps 16, 19, 22, and 25. For 1998-99, there shall be an increase of 3.39% on all unit salary schedules. Additionally, there shall be a revised extra duty salary schedule and an increase in the longevity steps from $1300 to $1400. The district and the association agree to continue negotiations on the impact of the sixth grade move, if any and the modifications necessary to the calendar based upon the legislation abolishing "SIP/AB days." The superintendent and W.T.A. president agree to issue a paycheck calendar in advance. The district agrees to apply the class size averages in the current agreement on or before the 15th school day. Those retirees who have been re-employed pursuant to the authorization for class size reduction will be placed closest to the salary which they left without regard to years or units of subsequent increases to the salary schedule. The Offer of Employment form will be attached as an appendix. Employees who let credentials lapse will be required to pay for all the necessary fees applicable including but not limited to fingerprinting. Employees are also warned that those who allow credentials to expire will not be eligible to render services for the district until and unless the credential is restored.

On behalf of W.T.A., Mrs. Yamat thanked the board of education and the administration.

C.S.E.A. update: There was no report.

The following recommended routine and consent items were approved:

1) Notice of completion for Southport Elementary School Data System; 2) Summary of purchase orders exceeding $5,000.00; 3) student recognition program.

Approved the three year district proposed 1998-2201 district goals and priorities.

Adopted the 1998-99 superintendent's objective.

Approved on a first hearing basis, the description of proposed program options and waiver forms -- Proposition 227.

Approved the appointment of 6th grade task force members.

Accepted the $10,900.00 from The Central Valley Foundation for the Evergreen Writing Project so that staff can implement and evaluate the proposed activities.

The item to place a school bond on the ballot in 1999 was pulled from the agenda. The item will be placed on the September 8 board agenda.

The board moved to ratify the two year mediated settlement between the Washington Teachers Association and the Washington Unified School District, for the 1997-98 and 1998-99 school years.

Since the Washington Teachers Association and the Washington Unified School District reached a settlement, the public hearing on their initial proposal was withdrawn.

Held a public hearing on the initial proposal of the California School Employees' Association.

The item to adopt the initial proposal of the Washington Unified School District and the Washington Teachers Association was withdrawn because the mediated settlement included the 1998-99 school year.

Adopted the initial bargaining proposal between the Washington Unified School District the California School Employees Association for the 1998-99 school year.

Approved both certificated and classified personnel recommendations, as presented, with an addendum to the certificated recommendations.

"It says 'parental discretion advised.' That means we don't tell Mom we watched it."

Sports Insider

By Richard Novoa

The Big Mac attack continues in St. Louis as Mark McGwire closes in on Roger Maris's major league home run record.

McGwire blasted his 61st home run on Sunday with his father in the stands celebrating his 61st birthday. What I find amazing is that McGwire has hit 14 HRs under tremendous pressure in a 20-game stretch. Sammy Sosa is close behind with 58 HRs. Major league baseball will benefit this year from a barrage of home runs produced by a large group of sluggers.

(Editor's note: as the News-Ledger went to press Tuesday night, word came in that McGwire had just hit his 62nd home run, for the new major league season record!)

This could be the first year in M.L. history that ten players could hit 50 or more home runs each in one season! In the national league, Sacramento's Greg Vaughn has 47, Andres Galarraga 43, and Vinnie Castilla has 42 bombs. The American League also has five sluggers with home run power, including Ken Griffey, Jr., with 50 HRs, Belle 45, Gonzales 41, Palmeiro 41, and even Jose Canseco has joined the parade with 41 four baggers. The regular season still has 20 games remaining for these guys to reach the bleachers.

The Giants lost two out of three in Los Angeles this weekend but the Cubs and Mets also fell into a small tailspin in the N.L. race for the wild-card spot. The Giants trail by two games with 19 games remaining. Jeff Kent has come on fire, being named the N.L. player for the month of August. If you can believe it, Kent beat out McGwire and Sosa for the award!

He has 19 homers and 58 RBIs in the last 42 games. The Giants will be in San Diego this week before coming home for a weekend series against the Rockies.

The 49ers and Jets put on a great offensive show last Sunday at 3Com Park that needed a 96-yard touchdown run by Garrison Hearst to win the game. The Niners' 36-30 win over New York was ugly, but counts in the standings. The 49ers defense better get back to the drawing board before they head to Washington for their Monday night game (5 p.m.) against the Redskins. The 49ers will show off on Monday night: 49ers 27, Redskins 13.

The Raiders, on the other hand, played like the "same old Raiders." Fifteen penalties, seven fumbles (five lost), and George was sacked ten times, including a safety.

Final score, 28-8.

Next week, the Raiders host the New York Giants (1:15 p.m.) in their home opener. The Giants beat Washington 31-24 as their defense registered eight sacks, forcing two turnovers and a touchdown! The Raiders will win this week -- Oakland 24, New York 23.

Every week, the Sports Insider will provide for your entertainment three top picks of the week (including the Monday Night games).

Last week, I gave you the Jets (+7 1/2) and the Chiefs (-7 1/2). Starting the season 2-0 is great, but let's see how I do this week! In week two, I like the Dolphins (-7 1/2) at home against Buffalo, Detroit (6 1/2) at home over the Bengals, and the 49ers (-3) at Washington on Monday night.

See ya next week!

Cheechov, RCHS cheerleaders honored

The River City High School cheerleaders returned from a National Cheerleaders Association summer camp, held August 22-25 at U.C. Davis. The camp attracted over 1,000 cheerleaders from surrounding cities.

The National Cheerleaders Association selects award winners at each of the over 1,100 camps it administers around the world each summer. The NCA, the largest privately held cheerleading organization in America, holds events for over 150,000 cheerleaders and dancers around the world. The National Cheerleaders Association, founded in 1948 by L.R. Herkimer, has been conducting training camps for 50 years.

The River City High School cheerleaders received the following awards at the summer camp they attended:

SHELLY CHEECHOV

Individual awards: Erin Cheechov received the All-American Award, the most prestigious individual award in cheerleading today. Participants vying for All-American status were judged on motion technique, jumps, tumbling, spirit and enthusiasm, voice projection and overall crowd appeal. These individuals are eligible to perform at various NCA special events including the Aloha Bowl.

Team awards: Spirit Award Winner, an award selected by the camp members as the team who exemplifies true team spirit and comradeship; Superior Award, awarded to teams which stand out during the entire camp as being superior in all areas; Motion Award (varsity team); and Stunt Safety Award (J.V. team).

If you want her to have a shot at reaching the stars, she needs to get her baby shots now.

Every child deserves the best opportunities life has to offer. Especially yours.

The odds of her becoming an astronaut and reaching the stars are out of this world. But the chances are more than 1 in 4 that your baby isn't protected against childhood diseases like polio, measles, chicken pox, tetanus and others.

So, even if you're sure your child is up to date and on schedule with her baby shots, ask your doctor at every visit. It couldn't hurt.

In fact, it could give her the chance to grow up to be whatever she wants to be.

Even if it's something out of this world.

News-Ledger Editorial:

Things to keep in mind about a school bond

The Washington Unified School Board has decided to put a school bond on the ballot for West Sacramento to vote on sometime next year. There are three important things to remember as this issue takes shape.

The first is that the district needs a school bond. Presumably, the new task force will recommend a bond measure that raises money both to build a new high school and to revamp a facility for the city's middle school students. Both of these are legitimate -- even vital -- causes for the community. Both River City High School and Golden State Middle School suffer from overcrowding (a situation which will be temporarily relieved at the middle school when the sixth grade level is moved back to local elementary schools next year) and aged, deteriorating facilities. A new high school is an unavoidable need for the community, and at least some of the money to finance it will have to come from a local school bond.

Even community members who do not have school-age children need a school bond. The shape of the district's school facilities will be one of the things that drives the way West Sacramento grows when the bulldozers finally do arrive in force, and homes really do begin to pop up like springtime wildflowers. The city is out of balance right now towards a lower income population, and an influx of new residents with higher economic status is needed to help balance the local economy and bring more shopping opportunities and services to all. These higher-income residents won't generally come to a city whose schools are in bad repair -- so if that is the situation in West Sacramento, expect the developers to have little choice but to market their "product" more towards the low end.

The second thing is that passing a school bond at a regular election in 1999 will be somewhere between "very difficult" and "downright impossible." One of the main reasons for this is the city's current demographics. West Sacramentans, taken as a group, don't value education the way some communities do. Many local residents are either on a fixed income or childless, and see a school bond as something that is a financial drain with no personal benefit. It will be very tough to get a bond measure passed in 1999, when little of the local demographics have changed, and it could be that a special election (with a limited voter turnout, but extra election costs) is necessary to give a bond a fair chance for the necessary two-thirds vote.

The third thing is that school board politics in West Sacramento is highly charged, faction-ridden and politicized. Regardless of whose "fault" this is, that is the way things are right now, and any school bond which is seen as the brainchild only of the school board, and not of the community itself, will suffer in the eyes of the voters.

The district is going out of its way to be inclusive to the extreme on its bond steering committee, and not to offend anybody by exclusion, but this is only a start. If a movement for a school bond doesn't spring up from the grassroots level, instead of simply be legislated downwards from above, the new bond won't stand a chance.

As much as possible, board members need to sow the seeds for this school bond and then stand aside, hoping that these grassroots will grow tall and fast. Old politics should be kept out of the picture.

Letters to the Editor

Goodbye & thanks!

My name is Catherine Swanson. I have been a teacher in the West Sacramento Teen Parent program at Yolo High School since 1973. I would have begun my 27th year of service to the community had I not been transferred to the Woodland Pearls Program.

Over the years, I have served over 1,000 pregnant teens, their babies and famlies. I am a "grandmother" to many of the babies born in the program in recent years, as their moms or dads had been babies in the program years ago.

I wish to say a very sad goodbye to the many young women who have enriched my life. I am a better person for having known you. I will miss you and the frequent personal visits and phone calls to update me about how your lives are going. These visits and phone calls have left me knowing I have made a tremendous positive difference in your lives. Thank you.

I wish I could name all of you and thank you individually, however I will just mention one young woman who graduated last June at the Crest Theater during the Yolo High School/ Adult Education ceremony. This young woman was a student in the Teen Parent Center when it was called T.A.P.E., this was fifteen years ago! She and I were so proud of the night of her graduation. She knew her goal and reached it and shared her joy with me. Thank you.

To the parents, community and Washington Unified School District, especially David Kopperud, I wish to thank you for entrusting me with these wonderful young women.

I have been transferred by Yolo County Superindent of Schools to the Woodland Pearls Program because the West Sacramento T.P.C. program suffered from declining enrollment last year, perhaps because I was unable to teach due to breast cancer. The program had numerous substitutes before a long-term substitute was hired.

Thank you again for making my life work meaningful to me -- all of you are still here in my heart -- I will not forget you and your wonderful babies.

If her house was on fire, you'd call 911. But what if she's being beaten? We all know danger when we see it. But what we do next depends on how safe and successful we feel our action will be. A woman is beaten by her partner every nine seconds in the U.S. In ads like this over the next year, we'll show you what you can do, safely and effectively, to put a stop to domestic violence. It's not about getting physical or putting yourself in between (that's what 911 is for). All you need to do is find a private time to say that you're concerned for her safety. And offer her this number to get experienced assistance right here in Yolo County: (530) 662-1133. Don't you know a woman who needs your help?

One in three Americans say they know a woman physically abused by her husband or boyfriend. This woman survived because someone like you knew what to do.

a young engineering student from Arizona named William Pitt Turner and a year later they were married.

"Pitt's work took us all over the country," recalled Betty. "We spent time in Missouri, Washington, D.C., Salt Lake City, and San Francisco before we finally settled down in West Sacramento to raise our family. At first we lived in a tiny little house on Willow Street, then we moved to Canna Way, and finally we designed and built our own house in Westwood Circle. Pitt was a very nice man, we had three wonderful children together, and it was very hard on all of us when he died at the age of 55 from cancer. Our church (the Presbyterian Church on the corner of Park and West Acres which her husband had helped design and construct) was very helpful during that difficult time, as were our friends and family."

With her daughters Judy and Janet married, and her son Pitt in college, Betty decided to return to college herself.

"I attended Sacramento City College first," said Betty, "and then I went to Sacramento State, where I received my bachelors and masters degrees in art. I taught at Bishop Armstrong for awhile, then I took a position at Saint Francis, which lasted for eight years. From there I went to Del Campo High School, where they actually doubled my salary and I taught art there for 12 years before retiring. They were such wonderful years. I could hardly believe my good luck, being allowed to get up every single morning and go off and do something I really loved."

After a second very happy marriage which lasted less than three years, Betty once again found herself a widow, but in 1978, she met Joe Sokolich, and they have now been married for 20 years.

"Joe is the perfect partner," said Betty. "We both like to travel, spend time outdoors, and work on projects together. He was a carpenter and builder by trade, and he can make just about anything you ask him to. He's really wonderful with his hands, and he's made a number of beautiful wood-turning pieces. When we were first married, we got in a VW camper and went to Canada for a month. Believe me, if two people can put up with each other in a cramped VW camper for a whole month, they have a very bright future in front of them. Plus Joe is such a great doer. In fact, he's at the church cleaning the stain glass windows as we speak."

Over the years, Betty's enthusiasm and excitement for the arts has not diminished at all and she continues to paint and exhibit her works. She has done watercolors, oils, etchings, woodcuttings, drawings, pottery, and stained glass windows.

"Everyone has a creative side," explained Betty, "and the arts can really enrich a person's life. I feel so lucky to have been able to raise a wonderful family and also work as a teacher and an artist. My life has been everything I had hoped it would be."

In addition to Betty's three children and Joe's adopted daughter, the Sokolich's have ten grandchildren and ten great-grandchildren.

Betty is also currently exhibiting some of her recent watercolor paintings at the Arthur Turner Library on Merkley Avenue. Hours are Monday, 12-8 p.m.; Tuesday/Wednesday/Thursday, 11:00 a.m. to 8 p.m.; and Friday/Saturday from 10:00 a.m. to 5:50 p.m. A reception for Betty will also be held on September 26th at the library from 2-4 p.m., and the public is cordially invited to attend.

smith not only knew how to make everything from horse shoes to very scary looking knives, he was also a walking history book when it came to iron smelting. "It's been going on for 7000 years," explained Craig. "It's the master craft, the one which made the industrial revolution possible. They mostly used coal, and you had to heat it to 3000 degrees. When they did use wood, they tried to get oak, and it took four acres of oak to make just one ton of steel."

Everywhere one looked, there was information about gold. For instance, did you know that they found a 195 pound chunk of it at Carson Hill in 1854? Or that gold was valued at 20 dollars an ounce in 1852? Or that the gold rush was still going on when the Civil War started? Or that you've got to heat gold to almost 2000 degrees before it begins to melt? Or that the most common way for a gold miner to strike it rich was to jump someone else's claim?

There were also Pony Express riders, prospectors, gamblers, respectable church-going women, inebriated cowboys, and just about anything else one would expect to find in the Mother Lode during the Gold Rush. Crowds were estimated to be between 25,000 and 35,000 each day of the event, even though temperatures were above 100 degrees. Organizers have pledged to continue the event for at least another year, hoping it will become as popular as the Sacramento Jazz Jubilee, which continues to draw crowds to Old Town Sacramento on Memorial Day weekend.

"Everyone that is on that committee should be a registered voter (in the district)," she commented. "It should not be representative of all kinds of organizations and so forth, it should be a citizens' committee. The other people need to have the opportunity to speak, but the institutional people like the board members, staff and developers should not have a vote."

School board members Irene Eklund and David Farmer will sit on the committee, as will city council member Bill Kristoff, developers Dan Ramos and Bryan Turner, a number of teachers, staff members, residents and others.

Several -- but not all -- candidates for the November, 1998, school board election were on the proposed committee before the school board meeting. After comments by Kelleher and candidate Ed Hocking, the school board voted to widen the committee by inviting all school board candidates to participate.

Hocking and board incumbent Ardeene Westvik said they would decline the invitation. Depending on the responses of the other five candidates, the new committee could range from 35 to 40 people.

A PETITION has been filed by DAYLE RADDIGAN in the Superior Court of California, County of Yolo.
THE PETITION requests that DAYLE RADDIGAN be appointed as personal representative to administer the estate of the decedent.

McGowan will be guest speaker at city historical society's Sept. 15 meet

From the West Sacramento Historical Society

The West Sacramento Historical Society will meet Tuesday, September 15 at 6:30 p.m. at the Arthur F. Turner Library, 1212 Merkley Avenue, West Sacramento.

Guest speaker for the meeting is Mike McGowan, Yolo County Board of Supervisor representing West Sacramento. McGowan will reminisce and talk about the Capitol Speedway which his family owned during the 1950s and 1960s. He will share family photographs for the evening. The speedway was located on U.S. 40, the Lincoln Highway, which is now West Capitol Avenue.

Related to the Lincoln Highway, the historical society is researching the possibility of signage and a monument of the Lincoln Highway, which was the first trans-continental highway going from New York to San Francisco, for West Capitol Avenue. They have been in touch with the Colfax Lincoln Highway organization to further their knowledge about the highway.

Progress is being made with the restoration of the fire engine, "Old Mary." New tires have been installed on the truck and the engine is running. Presently, work on the electrical system is taking place. Individuals may make a donation to the society for the restoration of the fire engine by sending a check to the West Sacramento Historical Society, P.O. Box 65, West Sacramento, CA, 95605. The society is a 501(C)3 non-profit organization. The donation is tax deductible.

For further information regarding the West Sacramento Historical Society contact either Jeri Hughes Wingfield at 371-7678 or Mickey Fausett at 372-5036.

Trees for signups

Ten free Arizona Cypress trees will be given to each person who joins The National Arbor Day Foundation during September 1998.

The free trees are part of the nonprofit Foundation's Trees for America campaign.

"Arizona Cypresses were selected for this campaign because of their drought tolerance and their many uses in the home landscape," John Rosenow, the Foundation's president, said. "They lend beauty to their surroundings with their blue-green foliage. They can be used as individual ornamentals, a windbreak or privacy screen, or as living Christmas trees."

The trees will be shipped postpaid at the right time for planting between October 15 and December 10 with enclosed planting instructions. The six to twelve inch trees are guaranteed to grow, or they will be replaced free of charge.

Members also receive a subscription to the Foundation's colorful bimonthly publication, Arbor Day, which includes regular features about tree planting and care.

To receive an introductory membership and the free trees, send a $10 membership contribution to Ten Arizona Cypresses, National Arbor Day Foundation, 100 Arbor Avenue, Nebraska City, NE 68410, by September 30, 1998.
